

Germany-Who's
Who in CIA STAT

HAVANA PUBLISHES MADER ARTICLE ON CIA

Havana VERDE OLIVO 20 Sep 70 pp 51-53

[Article by Julius Mader: "Who's Who in the CIA"]

CIA 101 Helms, Rich STAT
CIA 2.02

VERDE OLIVO Introduction

Orig under
Mader

[Text] The author of this work is also the author of the biographic reference work published under this title. On 20 November 1969 the Italian periodical VIE NUOVE published an incomplete account according to which "Who's Who in the CIA?" caused the secret service of the U.S. a financial loss of 70 million dollars. The Berlin foreign policy review HORIZONT recently described Dr. Mader as one of the world's most knowledgeable people on the most varied of secret services.

Mader Article

The current situation of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) on the Latin American continent is reflected in a very skeptical evaluation the chief of the inter-American security service, 51-year-old Frederick Dent Sharp, made to CIA Director Richard M. Helms in a secret report given him in December last year. Mr. Sharp said: "It is becoming increasingly more difficult to receive first-hand intelligence in South America soon enough. I cannot overemphasize the danger resulting from our being late in exerting influence, and excessive delay--as in the case of Peru--on our part (on the part of the United States)." This Mr. Sharp, outstanding CIA figure who speaks Spanish and Portuguese fluently, is without doubt in a position to make a judgment on this matter. As an alleged diplomat, he spent 24 consecutive years in Mexico, Guayaquil,